The FBI's Safe Streets Task Force kicked off the summer camp week last week by coaching at-risk youth through fitness activities and an obstacle course at the Belle Center in Buffalo.

Richard Frankel, special agent in charge of the FBI Buffalo office and Michael Rivera, interim executive director/board chair of the Belle Center were there as the task force, which combats gang activity in Western New York, coached at-risk youth participating in the center's summer program. The FBI and the Belle Center also educated summer campers about gang awareness.

The Belle Center, at 104 Maryland Street in Buffalo, is a multi-purpose community center that provides comprehensive programs and services to Western New Yorkers. It has worked closely with the FBI in recent years to help to deter violent crime, gangs and drugs on the lower West Side.
