"What should the Belle Center look like to best serve the next generation?" That question will be asked in two sessions today in the community center at 104 Maryland St. Listening to the answers will be workshop facilitators from Cannon Design and its educational design consultancy, The Third Teacher +. From 9 a.m. to noon, they'll hear staff and program participants, community members and organizations, business owners and local philanthropic foundations that work with the center. Then, from 3:30 to 5:30, they'll get an earful from youths who use the center, who will break into small groups to reimagine it.
